This is a choice collection of 150 movie reviews of classic and contemporary timeless movies by international syndicated film critic Susan Granger. It includes films from the earliest days to today, from the Russian film, "Battleship Potemkin" (1925) and "Gone With the Wind" (1939) to "Bridge of Spies" (2015) and "Zootopia" (2016). 150 TIMELESS MOVIES includes reviews reprinted from Granger's popular website, www.susangranger.com, as well as more than two dozen new reviews of English and foreign film classics. There is an original by Granger, who grew up in Hollywood; her father was director/producer S. Sylvan Simon, and, after his untimely death at 41 while filming "From Here to Eternity," her mother remarried and Susan's step-father was MGM executive Armand Deutsch.

Praise for 150 TIMELESS MOVIES:

"No one knows more about movies, old and new, and the way the film world works than Susan. So what an immense treat it is to have her for the first time talk about 150 of the movies that have intrigued her most within the covers of one book..."

—Robert Osborne, host for Turner Classic Movies

"Susan Granger is a wonderful film critic who has a generous heart, a delightful capacity for wonder, a keen critical eye, and a dexterous way with words. She writes spot-on reviews that are both well-informed and entertaining to read."

—Randy Pitman, Publisher/Editor, Video Librarian

"Susan Granger has given us this guide, 150 TIMELESS MOVIES, which should be an important addition to the library of anyone who loves film."

—Maria Cooper Janis, actor Gary Cooper's daughter

"I have known Susan since she was four years old. She was bright then—she's even brighter now—in every way. And she knows how to separate the wheat from the chaff."

—actress Jane Powell

“I can always trust Susan Granger to steer me to the movies I'll love (as well as the stinkers to avoid.) Not only is she a good guide, but she's a fun read. I am honored to be included in the timeless 150!”—Keir Dullea, actor, star of "2001: A Space Odyssey"
