With the rise of remote work and online meetings, this excuse has become more relevant than ever. Claim that you have an important video call scheduled and that you need the house to be quiet and distraction-free. Just make sure you're not caught binge-watching your favorite show during that time!

2. "I hurt my back."

A photograph of a piece of white, lined paper with a red cover, serving as a notepad. The paper is slightly crumpled and has a red binding strip at the top. Handwritten in dark red ink is a motivational message. The text is written in a cursive, slightly slanted font. The message reads: "bad things are always going to happen in life. people will hurt you. but you cant use that as an excuse to hurt someone back." The word "cant" is written without an apostrophe. In the bottom right corner, the word "Textgram" is written in a smaller, lighter red cursive font.

bad things are always going to happen in life.
people will hurt you.
but you cant use that
as an excuse to hurt
someone back.

Textgram

A classic excuse that never fails. Claim that you've hurt your back and that you're unable to perform any physically demanding tasks. It's a convenient excuse that allows you to sit back and relax while someone else takes care of the chores.

48. "I have an important deadline to meet."

Claim that you have an urgent deadline for work or school and that all your focus needs to be on that task. Highlight the importance of meeting that deadline to justify avoiding your chores. Remember, though, it's best not to use this excuse too frequently, or you might raise suspicions!

49. "I'll do it tomorrow."

I'll do
it tomorrow

I have no
intention whatsoever
of doing
what you asked me to

Finally, the most classic excuse in the book – procrastination. Lay back, relax, and promise yourself to do the chores tomorrow. But be warned, tomorrow might never come!
