This project started in an effort to combat burn out. It was many years into our ministry and I was about to quit to go live under a bridge as a hermit. Then I started to think of how God worked in and through my life. I remembered the good times. I remembered the bad times. I remembered God was always there in every up and down I faced. I started remembering and chronicling my journey with God into ministry. I intended for these little stories to encourage me by seeing how God was always at work. It worked. God worked. It's been a long time since I started this project and my wonderful wife, Beth, convinced me it might encourage other believers. I started sharing these in blogs and social media posts. I received quite a few encouraging responses and was honored when others requested my permission to use different stories in their own devotions and teaching situations.
