assured its forces that RVNAF units would desert in masses to the Communist banner. However, not a single unit went over to the enemy.

The enemy lost almost half his attacking force during the Tet attacks: 20,300 to the RVNAF; 18,581 to the U.S. and other free world forces. Within two days, the VC/NVA forces were pushed out of most towns and cities.

Much of the RVNAF toll of the enemy, however, has not been the result of large operations, but of small actions. Many of these involved Regional and Popular Forces (RF/PF). Stationed in villages and hamlets or operating from small bases, RF/PF personnel make up more than 50 per cent of the RVNAF. These Regional and Popular Forces consist of locally recruited personnel who serve in their home areas.

The RF/PF have greatly increased in efficiency since the issuance of M16s began. All maneuver battalions of RVNAF have been equipped with M16s, M60 machine guns and are receiving 60mm and 81mm mortars. Deliveries of the M79 grenade launchers and M113 armored personnel carriers are about 90 per cent complete.

Army of the Republic of Vietnam (ARVN) combat units increased their transportation capability by replacing old vehicles with new models while communications were improved by newer, lightweight PRC25 radios.

In addition to separate armored, infantry and artillery units, the ARVN consists of 10 numbered divisions, an airborne division and Special Forces organized along the same lines as the U.S. The average ARVN division has 3,000 to 4,000 fewer men than a U.S. division. Although usually employed in offensive operations against the VC and NVA main force units, ARVN units also provide security for key areas and installations.

A Tale of Valor and Resilience

"In the early hours of dawn, the jungle echoes with the heavy footsteps of warriors, adorned with rucksacks carrying their hopes, fears, and determination. They march through the unforgiving terrain of Vietnam, forging an unbreakable bond amidst the chaos and uncertainty of war."

The above lines epitomize the gripping essence of the memoir, "Rucksack Grunt: Vietnam Veteran Memoir." Authored by John Anderson, a brave soldier who served during the Vietnam War, this memoir takes readers on a remarkable expedition through one of the most tumultuous periods in American history.

RUCKSACK GRUNT - A VIETNAM VETERAN'S MEMOIR

A Vietnam War Memoir with an Underlying Love Story.

A narrative about a naive teenage boy's evolutionary journey from his safe suburban neighborhood in Pennsylvania to the dangerous Central Highlands in Vietnam to becoming a Vietnam War Veteran as he remembers it and still struggles today to understand it all.

The events of this narrative take place from 1969-1972, beginning with a young teenage boy's love for and his marriage proposal to his high school sweetheart. Robert then decided that the best path to obtaining an education and a "real" job needed to support their future marriage was through an easy short stint in the US Army. Little did the naïve teenager know that the path to accomplishing his goals would take him through the jungles and rice paddies of Vietnam during the latter years of the war. Although, not a blood and guts war story, this first-hand emotional account details the many traumatic and sometimes distressing encounters of Robert Kuhn, the "rucksack carrying grunt" who served with the 1st Battalion 22nd Infantry unit during his Vietnam tour of duty.
