Unleashing the Power of Words

At its core, Letters To The Earth is an artistic response to the climate crisis. It was initiated in 2019 by a collective of artists, writers, and activists who believed in the transformative power of language. The movement encourages people to write their own letters, poems, or monologues addressing the urgent issues our planet faces today.

These letters and words become a powerful tool to engage with others, raise awareness, and ignite conversations around climate change and environmental destruction. The movement believes that anyone can make a difference, and it starts with using their voice and sharing their ideas and concerns.

Each letter submitted to the Letters To The Earth project is a unique expression of one's relationship with the planet. Some letters are filled with despair, grief, and anger, reflecting the devastating impact of deforestation, pollution, and natural disasters. Others are filled with hope, optimism, and a call to action to protect and preserve our fragile Earth.

Regardless of the emotions behind each letter, they all carry an important message: we must act now to save our planet and create a more sustainable future for all living beings.

A Global Movement

What started as a small initiative in the United Kingdom quickly spread worldwide, capturing the attention of people from different continents, cultures, and backgrounds. The power of these letters lies in their ability to transcend borders and connect people through shared concerns and aspirations for a better world.

The movement gained significant momentum when renowned artists, writers, and activists joined the cause. Their influential voices and contributions gave the movement unprecedented visibility and relevancy. International celebrities and public figures lent their support, amplifying the message and inspiring millions to take action.

In addition to the individual letters, numerous performances, events, and exhibitions have been organized around the world to showcase these powerful words. From public readings to art installations, Letters To The Earth has become a global phenomenon that highlights the importance of collective action and engagement.

Changing the Narrative

One of the biggest achievements of Letters To The Earth is its ability to change the narrative around the environment. Rather than focusing solely on scientific data and statistics, this movement brings forth human stories and emotions, making the climate crisis tangible and relatable.

By sharing personal letters and stories, Letters To The Earth humanizes the environmental crisis and helps people understand the impact it has on their lives and the lives of future generations. It invites individuals to reflect on their own actions and empowers them to become agents of change.

Moreover, the movement goes beyond highlighting the problems; it also emphasizes the myriad solutions that individuals, communities, and governments can adopt. From renewable energy to sustainable agriculture, Letters To The Earth showcases the innovations and ideas that can lead us towards a more ecologically balanced world.

The Power of Unity

Letters To The Earth transcends political, cultural, and social boundaries, uniting people from all walks of life under a shared cause. It shows that climate change is not an isolated issue but one that affects us all. The movement promotes a sense of collective responsibility and demonstrates that only by working together can we bring about positive change.

The global nature of Letters To The Earth serves as a reminder that we are all interconnected and that our actions, regardless of where we reside, have far-reaching consequences. It inspires individuals and communities to forge alliances, collaborate, and support one another in creating a sustainable and resilient future.

A Call to Action

Letters To The Earth is more than a collection of written words; it is a call to action. The movement encourages everyone to take steps towards a more sustainable lifestyle and urges governments and institutions to prioritize climate action.

Whether it's reducing your carbon footprint, supporting local and sustainable businesses, or engaging in grassroots activism, Letters To The Earth empowers individuals to make a difference in their own lives and communities.

Together, these letters form a powerful testament to our collective will to protect the Earth and ensure a better future for generations to come.

Letters To The Earth has become a rallying cry for individuals across the globe who seek to make a positive impact on the environment. Through the power of words, this movement has connected people, changed the narrative around the climate crisis, and inspired action at both individual and collective levels.

As we continue to face the challenges posed by climate change, the importance of movements like Letters To The Earth cannot be overstated. They serve as a constant reminder of the urgency of our actions and the power we hold to shape a sustainable future.

So, join the movement, pick up your pen, and let your voice be heard. Write a letter to the Earth and be a part of the change we desperately need.

A profound, powerful and moving collection of 100 letters from around the world responding to the climate crisis, introduced by Emma Thompson and lovingly illustrated by CILIP award winner Jackie Morris.

‘All power to this amazing project.’ JOANNE HARRIS

‘Makes sense of the climate crisis in a whole new way’ MAGID MAGID

How can we begin to talk about what is happening to the world? How can we explain to our children, and to ourselves, what the future of our planet might look and feel like?

Letters to the Earth is the beginning of a new conversation. One that attempts to answer some of these questions by listening to the voices of parents and children; politicians and poets; songwriters and scientists. Gathering together over 100 letters written in response to the climate emergency, each entry begins to give language to the unspeakable, and shows how our collective power is present when we are ready to slow down and listen to each other.

It's natural to feel worried or concerned about what the future of the earth holds. These letters are an opportunity to reflect on our connection to the planet and each other in times of crisis. They are also an opportunity to act and respond to this crisis. To put pen to paper and make your voice heard.
