Overcoming Personal and Academic Challenges in School Essay

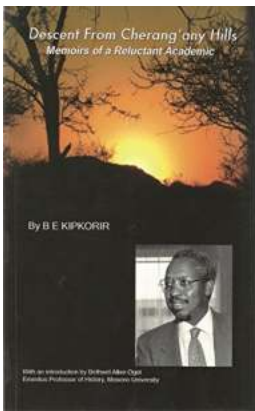

In the world, every person is faced with many challenges and obstacles throughout their lifetime. My life in particular has been filled with many roadblocks and troubling challenges. When going through hard times I find it better to keep a smile and find ways to stay motivated to overcome my obstacles. Throughout my high school career, I've taken honors classes and an AP class, which was a tough task, but I founded ways to stay successful and overcome the difficulty.

My hardest year in high school was my Junior year. A Junior year is the time when getting your grades and GPA up is vital. I wanted to make sure that going into my senior year I was set and ready to start the college journey. I had taken honors classes throughout high school and thought I could handle it; however, I found myself on the edge of failing. My thoughts were that it would be okay if I did just enough to pass, but then I realized that it could affect my senior year and chances of going to college.

In order to overcome this obstacle, I had to sacrifice a lot of my free time with friends to study and perfect what I was struggling with. I developed certain skills and ways to stay motivated and overcome this challenge. I worked on college work and breaking down my tasks into parts to better help me get closer to tackling this obstacle. I put all of my time and energy into motivating myself to work hard and achieving the goals I set.

After putting my plan into action, I immediately noticed a change in my classes and grades. Succeeding and overcoming that obstacle was one of the best feelings in the world. At the end of my junior year, I was ranked top 13 percent in my class and came into my senior year prepared for college preparations. All of my hard work paid off because I executed my plan and overcame my challenge of passing honors and college classes. In my senior year, I've gotten accepted into colleges and achieve my goal. The most important lesson I learned is that if I am ever in a challenging situation I can overcome it, as long as I stay motivated and give my all.

There will always be a time when every person in the world is faced with many difficult problems and complications. Throughout my lifetime, I've faced many challenging situations, but when going through them, it was easier when I found things to motivate me. The most challenging was high school. In my high school career, I've taken honors and college classes, which wasn't easy.

The life story of B. E. Kipkorir (1939-2015) is a stunning account told with the grace and ease of a seamless symphony; in captivating literary language, complete with rhetorical flashes of gripping phrases and simple sentences mortised to astonishing tightness. It is a story about the ultimate triumph of a man who beat great odds to scale the highest heights he possibly could.

A singular raconteur, the author weaves a tapestry – spanning many years – in quick rapid fire, both vivid and compelling. It's a story to make you laugh, a story to make you cry, to build your faith to maximize your potential, for it is a story about possibilities.

We read fascination as the quintessential Marakwet village boy, with almost frightful upbringing turns into a consummate academic (albeit reluctantly), as he makes an epic journey through GAS Tambach, Alliance High School, Makerere University and finally, to Cambridge University, England.

Kipkorir, an amazing figure of pure will, took his burning ambition to equally deadly and fierce combat zones of war: study, the corporate world and public service; working, as a Deputy Clerk of the Sirikwa County Council, a lecturer at the University of Nairobi, Executive Chairman of the Kenya Commercial Bank and later, as Kenya's Ambassador to Washington.

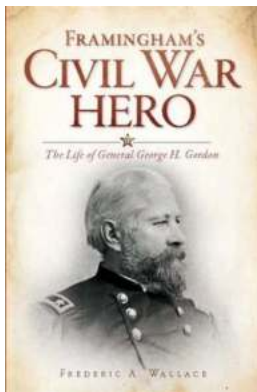

Then, in a cruel twist of fate, disaster struck the Kipkorir's closely-knit family, with the force of a hurricane - and the family was shaken to a jolt - when Kipkorir's wife, Lea, was diagnosed with cancer. The author nostalgically relives his last days with Lea, in a language that is heartbreaking, poetic and haunting; he recounts joys past and envisions what could have been.

Despite the passionately penetrating, often unflattering accounts of his personal and family life, these memoirs are a work of history. Of no less relevance are his accounts of the incredibly amateurish approaches of European missionaries to the social engineering of African societies and their culture, aided in so small
