Freire argues that traditional education tends to perpetuate unequal power structures and serves the interests of the ruling class. He believes that true education should empower individuals to critically analyze their social reality and actively participate in transforming it. By engaging in critical dialogues and praxis, learners become co-creators of knowledge and agents of change.

Key Themes Explored in Pedagogy Of The Oppressed

In Pedagogy Of The Oppressed, Freire delves into several key themes, each contributing to his vision of liberating education:

- Conscientization: The process of becoming critically aware of one's social and political reality and taking action to change it.
- Banking Education: A term used to describe traditional, one-way educational practices that deposit knowledge into passive learners, reinforcing oppressive systems.
- Problem-Posing Education: An alternative to banking education, where teachers and learners engage in dialogue, questioning, and problem-solving together.
- Praxis: The integration of theory and practice, where learners apply their knowledge and take action in the world to transform it.
- Dialogue: A key component of liberating education, allowing learners to engage in critical and respectful conversations with their peers and teachers.
