1. Snotty Monsters

Let's start with a classic - snotty monsters! These creatures are known for their slimy appearance and the mucus dripping from their noses. Begin by drawing a rough outline of the monster's body using wavy lines to give it a more organic feel. Then, focus on the facial features:

- Large, bulging eyes that seem to bulge out of their sockets.
- A big, dripping nose with gooey snot coming out.
- Sharp, crooked teeth that are covered in saliva.

Once you've perfected the details, add some additional gross elements like oozing sores or warts to give your snotty monster an even nastier look. Don't forget to color it in various shades of green or yellow to enhance the ickiness factor!

2. Vomit-Inducing Food

Who doesn't love a good food-related gross drawing? Let's create a vomit-inducing meal that will surely make people lose their appetite. Start by drawing a plate or bowl filled with something unpleasant like a mixture of rotten eggs and moldy vegetables. Use squiggly lines and asymmetrical shapes to make it appear unappetizing. Next, illustrate the chunks of undigested food floating around in the vomit and add some flies buzzing around the plate. Remember to use a range of putrid colors like brown and green to make it even more repulsive!

3. Disgusting Animals

Now, let's move on to creating repugnant animals that will make people cringe. Pick your favorite creepy crawlies or slimy creatures like spiders, maggots, or slugs. Begin by drawing the basic shapes of the animal's body, ensuring to exaggerate their gross features:

- For spiders, make their bodies bulbous and hairy with multiple beady eyes.
- For maggots, draw them as wriggly, flesh-colored worms with slimy textures.

- For slugs, capture their sliminess by creating a long, moist body with a trail of gooey mucus.

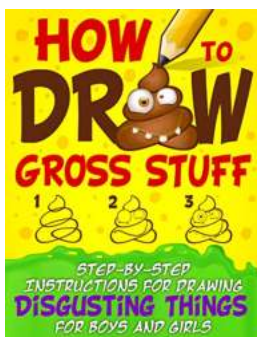

Add extra details such as slimy trails or crawling insects to enhance the disgusting factor. Remember to choose appropriate colors, like brown or gray, to make your drawing feel more realistic and unpleasant.

4. Gory Wounds

If you're feeling particularly adventurous, let's explore the world of gory wounds! This step might make some people squeamish, but for others, it will be a thrilling challenge. Start by sketching the outline of the wound and then focus on adding realistic details. Think deep cuts, torn flesh, and exposed bones.

Bring the wound to life by incorporating elements like dripping blood, flies or maggots feasting on the flesh, or even protruding broken bones. Use various shades of red and brown to give the wound a fresh and wounded appearance.

There you have it – a guide to drawing the most disgusting things for boys and girls. Remember, the key is to embrace the grossness and let your imagination run wild. By following these step-by-step instructions, you'll be able to create truly repulsive and revolting drawings that will shock and awe your friends and family.
