Exploring California's Spanish Missions

The Spanish missions in California were built between 1769 and 1833, and they served as religious and military outposts to spread Christianity and Spanish influence in the area. The missions played a significant role in the colonization of California and the interactions between the Spanish settlers and the indigenous populations.

California Spanish Missions Primary Source Readers shed light on this fascinating era by presenting primary sources that showcase the experiences of both the Spanish missionaries and the Native Americans who lived in and around the missions. Through personal accounts and records, readers can gain a deep understanding of the daily life, struggles, and triumphs that occurred within the walls of these missions.
