The Cunning Plan

The old man owned a vegetable patch, which was often raided by mischievous monkeys. No matter how hard he tried to keep them away, they would always find a way to feast on his crops. This angered the old man, and he shared his concerns with the rabbit.

The rabbit, being a cunning and intelligent creature, suggested a plan to teach the monkeys a lesson they would never forget. They devised a plan to scare the monkeys away from the vegetable patch forever.

The Thrilling Revenge

The next day, the old man constructed a makeshift trap using bamboo sticks. He carefully hid it near his vegetable patch so that the monkeys wouldn't notice. As the monkeys gathered to steal the vegetables, they fell into the trap one by one, unable to escape.

Watching from a distance, the rabbit knew it was time to enact their revenge. Using his magical powers, the rabbit made the bamboo sticks catch fire. The trapped monkeys, panic-stricken, screamed for help as the fire grew more intense. The old man came running, pretending to rescue them while secretly rejoicing at their plight.

The Creation of Kachi Kachi Mountain

The monkeys, feared for their lives, pleaded with the old man to save them from the fire. With a wicked smile on his face, the old man pretended to consider their pleas. But instead of rescuing them, he mockingly tossed them into a river, where they were swept away by the current.

Upon returning home, the rabbit, grateful to the old man for ridding the village of the monkeys, revealed his true identity and granted the old man a wish. The old man, inspired by the beauty of the mountains surrounding them, had a dream to create a memorable place for future generations to cherish.

With a single wave of his paw, the rabbit transformed the trapped monkeys into a beautiful mountain range, now known as Kachi Kachi Mountain. The old man's wish had been granted, and the village would forever be safeguarded against the pesky monkeys.
