2. Dividend: Dividends are a portion of a company's earnings distributed to shareholders as a reward for their investment. Dividends can be paid in cash or additional stocks.

4. Volatility: Volatility refers to the degree of fluctuations in stock prices. It is often seen as a measure of risk, with higher volatility indicating potential for greater gains or losses.
5. Market Capitalization: Market capitalization, or market cap, is the total value of a company's outstanding shares. It is calculated by multiplying the current share price by the number of shares outstanding.

6. Bull Market: A bull market refers to a period of rising stock prices, usually accompanied by positive investor sentiment and optimism about the economy.

7. Bear Market: In contrast to a bull market, a bear market is characterized by falling stock prices and pessimism among investors.

8. Initial Public Offering (IPO): An IPO is the first sale of a company's shares to the public. It marks the transition from a privately held company to a publicly traded one.

9. Liquidity: Liquidity is the ease with which an asset, such as stocks, can be bought or sold without causing significant price fluctuations. Stocks with high liquidity are more tradable, allowing investors to enter or exit positions quickly.

10. Diversification: Diversification is the practice of spreading investments across different asset classes and sectors to reduce risk. By diversifying your portfolio, you can mitigate the impact of any single investment's performance on your overall returns.

11. P/E Ratio: The price-to-earnings ratio (P/E ratio) is a valuation ratio that compares a company's share price to its earnings per share. It helps investors assess the relative value of a stock and its growth potential.

12. Stop-Loss Order: A stop-loss order is an order placed with a broker to sell a stock if it reaches a certain predetermined price. It helps limit potential losses by automatically triggering a sale if the stock price falls beyond a specified point.

13. Blue-Chip Stocks: Blue-chip stocks are shares of well-established companies with stable earnings and a long history of reliable performance. These companies are typically leaders in their respective industries and are considered less risky investments.

14. Market Order: A market order is an instruction to buy or sell a stock at the best available price at the time the order is placed. However, the exact price at which the trade is executed may differ from the quoted price due to market fluctuations.

15. Short Selling: Short selling is a trading strategy where an investor borrows shares of a stock and sells them with the expectation that the stock price will decline. The investor then repurchases the shares at a lower price to return them to the lender, profiting from the price difference.
