Manzanar Internment Camp is a dark symbol of the United States' history, particularly during World War II. It serves as a reminder of a time when fear and prejudice overpowered justice and compassion. Today, we shed light on an untold story that provides a glimpse into the lives of those affected through the Manzanar Internment Camp Diary English Translation 12741 121742.

In 1942, shortly after the Pearl Harbor attack, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066, which paved the way for the mass relocation and internment of over 120,000 Japanese Americans, the majority of whom were U.S. citizens. These innocent individuals were stripped of their homes, belongings, and freedom simply because of their ethnicity.

The Manzanar Internment Camp, located in California's Owens Valley, was one of ten camps established to imprison Japanese Americans during the war. It held approximately 10,000 people at its peak. The stories of resilience, courage, and hope from these individuals during their time of adversity are captured within the pages of the Manzanar Internment Camp Diary.

The late Karl G. Yoneda (1906-1999), former Japanese-American labor activist & WWII veteran, published this diary in Japanese in 1988 through the PMC Publishing Co. in Tokyo, Japan. It chronicles the period from Dec. 7th 1941 to Dec. 17th 1942, during which he and his family were forcibly interned in the "Relocation Center" for Japanese-Americans at Manzanar, California. This e-book is an English rendition thereof, originally translated from the Japanese by Ian R. Forsyth between 1992-1995. In 1997 a very few (5) hard copies were "desktop-published" by the translator, but this e-book represents the first formal publication of the English version.
